

History of The Old Bank

At a meeting in November 1858, the Catholic young men's society decided the church street premises was unsuitable, and thusly set up a committee to raise funds to build a new Town Hall and society rooms. As reported in the Cork examiner released 22 May 1861: 'The site of a new Town Hall [was] purchased in fee simple from the Duke Of Devonshire.'

In April of 1862, Basil Holmes of the London & South of Ireland Telegraph Co. (C/O Dobbyn's Hotel, Waterford) contacted the Dungarvan Town Commissioners who approved the first telecommunications room in Dungarvan to be built in the basement of this very building.

Many years on, when the free state troops entered Dungarvan on 16 August 1922 they occupied numerous buildings including the provincial Bank on this site.

In January 1978 the bank advertised the sale of the premises and it was acquired by Waterford Foods for £140, 000. It later became used as a local artists gallery and studios. This iconic building of history was recently acquired by property developer Mr Michael Ryan and completely restored to the splendour you see here today.

Throughout the refurbishment we have worked closely with the local community to ensure historical artefacts and commissioned pieces of art are displayed within this beautiful iconic building. The greatest care has also been taken to ensure the building's original Cumbrian stonework has been preserved.

Much of the ceramics and tableware have been designed and commissioned and the garments you see the team proudly wearing have been especially designed by renowned international Fashion designer Anthony Price and tailored in Hong Kong for each individual.
